LOOKING AFTER UPKEEP OF ROADS

ROAD MAINTENANCE DEPARTMENT IN N. W. MISSOURI.

J.F.JAMES FOR NODAWAY

State Highways are to Be Dragged Within 24 to 36 Hours After a Rain.

(St. Joseph News-Press)

The twelve counties in the St. Joseph division of the state road maintenance department are being organized, and the active work of maintenance will be started soon, according to N. R. Sack, division engineer, stationed here. H. M. Miller, who has been a construction engineer for three years under Sack, has been appointed supervising maintenance engineer.

Miller's headquarters are in St. Joseph. He is under the direction of Sack and also under C. P. Owens, general maintenance engineer, with headquarters in Jefferson City. The maintenance of state roads is a new thing in Missouri, and was, made possible by the passage of a constitutional amendment at the November election. The money for the work is derived from the motor vehicle license tax.

The state has been divided into ten divisions, and the St. Joseph division numbers the following named counties: Buchanan, Andrew, Clinton, Atchison, Nodaway, DeKalb, Caldwell, Gentry, Worth, Daviess, Harrison and Holt. In each county a superintendent is appointed. He is immediately under Miller, and is charged with keeping the state roads in condition.

With the exception of Worth and Harrison counties, these superintendents have been appointed. They have their headquarters in the county seats and are well instructed in road work. Those named are: Buchanan, Harry Schaffer; Andrew, A. L. McMullen; Atchison, William Capper; Holt, W. F. Markt; Clinton, J. D. Jones; Caldwell, Charles Yates; DeKalb, J. A. Utz; Daviess, Robert Black; Gentry, Harry Dresbach; Nodaway, J. E. James.

It is the intention of the state highway department, according to Engineer Sack, to give the people the very best in roads that the money will furnish. Under this new division every state road in Missouri will be dragged within twenty-four to thirty-six hours after a rain, and all impassable spots will be put in good condition. What the department hopes for is all-year roads.

In the near future a patrol system will be started on the roads. Each county will have a patrolling force, which will work under the county superintendent. Those doing the work will go over all roads in their county with a team and a drag. If the road is found to be in such a condition that extra work is needed, the matter will be reported to the county headquarters, and an edequate force will be detailed to repair it. This work applies both to dirt and hard-surfaced roads under state supervision. In the event that a hard-surfaced road is found to be wearing immediate repairs will be made on it. In this way the roads will last for a greater period of time than formerly.

The trucks and tools used in this work are furnished the state by the government. The trucks were those used in the army, and are from the surplus war supply. A supply depot will be maintained at St. Joseph, and smaller depots will be placed at county headquarters. In this way all waste of time in waiting for materials will be eliminated.

HUGHES MAY ATTEND SANTIAGO MEET

REPUBLICS PIN HOPES ON ATTENDANCE OF SECRETARY

CHILE IS PRIME MOVER

A Disarmament Conference for the American Republics to be Held in March

By Harry L. Rogers
International News Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 2—Announcement that Secretary of State Hughes hopes to attend the fifth Pan-American Conference, which opens at Santiago, Chile, in March, has resulted in greater optimism among advocates of a limitation of armaments agreement for the American republics.

Though representatives of the 21 American nations making up the Pan-American Union voted unanimously to consider limitation of armaments at the conference, and the subject was duly placed on the agenda, skepticism has been aroused by recent events in Latin-America, and many diplomats believe only the presence of Hughes, with the weight of his Washington Conference achievements behind him, can give the conference a chance of success.

Doubt of this was based primarily upon uneasiness as to the attitudes of Brazil Chile and Peru.

Brazil Fights Cut

The Brazilian representative at the League of Nations recently objected to a plan of the League Disarmament Commission providing for reduction of the military establishments of all member nations. Brazil, through her representative, also stated her unwillingness to agree to the principles of the Washington naval treaty, because it would limit naval construction on the basis of her prosent strength and would prohibit her from constructing naval bases. Brazil has no navy yards now and would be prevented, it is argued, from ever supplying her needs in that direction if she assented to the principle of the Washington Conference treaties. On that basis, it was stated, Brazil would be given only two capital ships and some minor vessels, which would be entirely incommensurate with her wealth, population, and extensive coast line.

Brazil is now planning the construction of two naval bases, and she recently signed an agreement with the United States whereby a Naval Commission, headed by Rear Admiral Carl T. Vogelgesang, U. S. N., with sixteen American naval officers and nineteen petty officers, have been lent to the Brazilian Navy to assist in its reorganization.

This American Naval Mission to Brazil has already been the subject of considerable caustic comment in the press of Argentina, Chile and other countries.

Chile Prime Mover

The movement to make the Santiago Conference primarily a "disarmament conference" is understood to have received greatest impetus from Chile, regarded as probably the best equipped both as to army and navy, of all the Latin-American countries. But Chile was unusually hard hit by the economic depression following the war!

The Brazilians, on the other hand, look upon themselves as somewhat isolated in South America because of the fact that they are of Portuguese and not Spanish extraction. Their defense policy is understood to be based upon the theory that they should have a strength equal to that of Argentina and Chile combined, especially since the two latter countries have shown a consistent tendency to co-operate.

The second big obstacle to a disarmament agreement results from the long-standing dispute between Chile and Peru over the Tacna-Arica boundary. Despite the nominal agreement reached recently in Washington relations are still strained, and Peru may refuse to attend the Pan-American Conference at Santiago.

Latin-American diplomats however, believe that the presence of Secretary Hughes at Santiago will tend to smooth out difficulties.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NODAWAY COUNTY

For County Superintendent of Schools.

I hereby announce that I will be a candidate for superintendent of schools for Nodaway County, subject to the decision of the voters at the school election on Tuesday, April 3, 1923.

LESLIE G. SOMERVILLE.

LATE HOURS EXPENSIVE

Some people seem to grow happier and happier, as Dr. Coue might say, the later it gets at night. Their spirits rise while other people grow sleepy. They feel a certain exhilaration in being up and enjoying life at midnight or later, while more prosaic folks are snoozing in their beds.

Young people are apt to have that point of view. Perhaps it is a reaction from the days when they were under parental control and were forced against their will to go to bed early. It seems mighty fine now to be able to sit up as late as they want to. They feel they are enjoying life in a sporting way, and can boast to each other how late they sat up the night before.

A student in one of the big colleges recently told about the habits of the fellows in this respect. He works for a morning newspaper in the city and when he gets back at about 1 o'clock, many of his fellow students are still up. Yet they have to turn out for early chapel in the morning. Somehow late hours seem to exhilarate them and make them feel they are really seeing life.

These young people will learn in due time that nature demands a certain amount of sleep. Those with strong bodies can trifle with this requirement for a time and apparently be no worse for it. But sooner or later they will have to pay for violation of a basic law of health.

"Early to bed and early to rise,
If you would be healthy, wealthy and wise."

said the old saw. That may be thought old fashioned today, but there, was truth in it. The hours of sunlight are those in which the human race thrives best. The hours of dark were made primarily for rest. A penalty must be paid if too many of them are turned into dissipation.

It is all right to set
Your eyes on the mountain peak
But if you want to get there
You must keep your feet in the road.

It is a good thing for the world that we are not so good as we think we are or other people not so bad as we think they are.

Before he gets her there is a lot of cooing but about a month after they are married the billing starts.

A young woman answered an advertisement of a local merchant who wanted a clerk. "Have you ever had any experience behind the counter selling" the tradesman asked. "No" she replied "but I have a lot of experience in front of the counter buying." She is now behind the counter.

Doesn't it make you mad to spend about half of your life helping a man build a business and then when things are going good to have him put his inexperienced son in charge?

Uncle Abner says about the only time some people appear normal is when they are asleep.

From the jovial nature of the average old bachelor we have come to the conclusion that life without love is not so bad after all.

We have known quite a few bank tellers in our time and we can say that they are almost human and not so blaze and superior as they appear through the window.

Now that Mr. G. H. has put on his annual act we suppose everybody in Maryville feels better and can settle down knowing what kind of weather to expect before the birds sing.

One of our American Legion friends says he hopes there will not be another was as when he came home from the last none of his clothes would fit and he had to get an entire new outfit.

Louise, the stenographer, says the average man seems to be out when fortune knocks at his door.

Have you not often wondered what the neighbor women would do if everybody suddenly became good and did not make any more scandals.

Here's a popular way to serve Kellogg's Bran—greatest health food!

Most every one who realizes how effective Kellogg's Bran is for the permanent relief of constipation has their own particular way of serving this wonderful cereal. Most families eat it as a cereal with milk or cream. Others sprinkle it on their favorite hot or cold cereal. Every one enjoys its nut-like flavor!

If you are cooking a hot cereal try this method:—Measure off two table spoonfuls for each member of the family. Mix it with the cereal and cook as you always cook the cereal.

Kellogg's Bran is scientifically prepared and ready to eat, but its regulatory powers are in no way impaired if you cook it with other cereals.

Kellogg's Bran has won the friendly recommendation of physicians because it does give prompt and permanent relief from mild or chronic constipation and because it can be eaten without forming a habit. Again, Kellogg's Bran will free you from drastic, dangerous cathartics.

When constipation conditions exist in your system or when you are threatened, do not take half-way measures. Foods with a partial bran content cannot free you! What you must have is Kellogg's Bran because it is ALL BRAN! Go the limit; get relief!

Every member of your family will delight in eating Bran raisin bread, muffins, pancakes, macaroons, etc. Recipes on every package.

Start eating Bran to-day! Get well—keep well—keep disease out of your home! First-class hotels, clubs and restaurants serve Kellogg's Bran in individual packages. All grocers.

DO YOU KNOW WHY

so many men of taste and discrimination bring their guests here to dine? It is because they like the service which is swift and silent, the cuisine which is unapproached, the quality of the food which is high, and the sanitary equipment, for which we are famous.

NINE MEN WOULD NOT EVEN THANK HIM FOR CURING THEM

Only One Out of Ten Came Back to Bless the Great Physician

(By C. L. Ficklin, Editor Dekalb County Herald, Maysville, Mo.)

The Sunday School lesson for February 4 is about the ten lepers whom the Master cured.

They had a terrible disease. They were outcasts. They were not permitted to come near other people. They had a loathsome trouble. They were lonely and lonesome. They could not even live with their own families. It was in some respects worse than being in the state penitentiary.

Jesus was going along the border line between Galilee and Samaria and they called to Him. He told them to go and show themselves to the priest; and as they went on the way they were all cured.

Only one came back to bless the Great Physician—and he was a Samaritan.

Nine of them forgot the Doctor who had cured them.

They were not the only people who have forgotten the doctor who cured them.

We have doctors now. These doctors are not to be compared in power and glory of heart with the Great Physician.

But some people that these doctors wait on are to be compared with the nine lepers all right. For we have ingrates now like they had ingrates then.

I like the spirit of the good doctor of the average country town. He practices not only in the town, but far out into the country. When he is called he gets up and goes.

If he is alsleep he gets up and goes.

If he is sick himself, he gets up and goes.

If he is called out ten miles on a cold night to the home of Jim Skinnum he goes. He finds this man all excited and helpless and mellow and crying—his wife is sick. The man begs the doctor to please do something to save her. You'd think that this husband was one of the tenderest of men, and that he would appreciate anything in the world the doctor might do for the sick woman. The doctor pulls the lady out of a desperate attack.

He goes back home and freezes his nose on the way at three o'clock in the morning. And as he rubs his frozen nose he says to himself.

"Jim was all broke up to-night about his wife's condition. She was mighty sick. But I know Jim. His wife is going to get over the sick spell And Jim is going to get over his mellow spell too. He will never pay the doctor bill."

And the ingrate forgets the man who did the finest thing in the world for him—saved his wife.

Why are people that way?

Why are they that way toward other men?

Why are they that way toward God?

I know a nice little town set down handsomely into a fine farming district of Northwest Missouri. Prosperity has blessed it. Crops were fine last year. The oats crop was good. The wheat was fine. The corn crop was a bumper. The Poland China hogs and the Durocs and the Chester Whites made a great showing, and the fine chickens at the chicken show were probably the best that were ever put on exhibit. Health and plenty blessed the land. The preachers of the town got together and tried to hammer up sentiment for a union Thangsgiving service.

And what do you think happened?

The people did not want a Thanksgiving service. So few showed any interest at all in the service that it was abandoned.

Does that mean that the people have no spirit of gratitude and thanks to-ward Almighty God for the bounties that have been spread forth out of His Wonderful Hand?

Draw your own conclusions.

Nuineteen hundred years ago a baby was born. He was God's only Begotten Son. He came to earth and took on the form of a man to suffer and bleed and die to show people that God loved them. He lived a perfect life. He manifested perfect wisdom. He had perfect power. He loved with a perfect love.

He broke His heart upon the world, and when people spat upon Him and cuffed Him and ran spears in His side, and jammed a mass of thorns down into His head and nailed His body on a cross—even then He loved them and asked God to forgive them.

And they went ahead and killed Him there.

And he arose out of the grave—and proclaimed mercy and forgiveness for the slayers and for all evil doers everywhere.

And yet the people, lots of people, thousands of people, millions of people are unmoved by His life, His love, His death, and all His sorrows and sufferings.

They are ingrates.

I told a story once to illustrate this.

I knew about an able preacher. He went into a community, preached about two weeks, told the story of the cross and of Christ. The people sat like icicles.

Then he switched the program one night.

He told about a man and his dog. The dog was faithful to the man. In success and defeat the dog stayed with him, and I think maybe the man finally died and the dog moaned over his grave.

When the preacher had finished the story the people were crying. And the preacher spoke thus:

"I have been here two weeks telling you about the suffering and bleeding and dying of the Son of God—and you have sat here like chunks of ice. I have come here tonight and told you a made-up tale about a cur dog—and you are all bawling like a bunch of sick calves. I'll not preach another minute for an outfit of this kind."

And he walked down the aisle and left. And so far as I know he never went back to get his pay check from the bunch of thankless ingrates.

There is something worse than hoggishness about the ingratitude of the man who does not appreciate the Blood of Christ.

They say that this lesson is one about ingratitude. But there is one other thought in it that seems to thump at me and demand that it be given voice. Listen to these words:

"And it came to pass that as they went they were healed."

I believe that some of the finest revolutions of heart the world has ever known come upon the people DURING OBEDIENCE. These lepers had faith. They were not cured before they started. They started before they were cured, and then were cured on the way. And God will work wonders in your life, if you will just do what He tells you to do.

WHO KILLED RUDOLF OF AUSTRIA?

THE proverbial "luck of the Hapsburgs"—a synonym for ill fortune rather than good—manifested itself in a number of ways during the long reign of Franz-Josef, late emperor of Austria-Hungary, but none of the occurrences were more startling or mysterious than those connected with the sudden death of Rudolf, crown prince of the realm and favorite son of Franz-Josef.

Married to the Princess Stephanie, daughter of Leopold II, king of the Belgians, Rudolf was far from happy in his marital relations, and comparatively short time had elapsed after his marriage when he attempted to induce his wife to secure a divorce in order that he might marry Maria Vetsera, a beautiful young baroness with whom he was madly in love. Franz-Joseph, however, sternly forbade all thought of divorce and, Rudolf announced that he was prepared to renounce all his title and marry the Baroness Vetsera in spite of parental objections. This was recalled vividly when, only a few months later, there occurred the "Meyerling tragedy."

Late in January, 1869, Rudolf staged a gay house party at the castle of Meyerling, some twelve miles from Vienna. Among the guests was the Baroness Maria Vetsera and gossip concerning her affair with the crown prince ran high, finally breaking with a clash when, on the morning of January 30, Rudolf's valet entered his master's bed chamber and found the crown prince dead and, beside him, the body of the beautiful baroness.

The first official report stated that the crown prince had died of apoplexy but, as his rugged physique and exceptional health were well known throughout the court circles of Europe this statement was received with a smile and much shrugging of shoulders. Following this there came a flood of rumors and supposedly "authentic" accounts of the tragedy, some of which stated that the baroness had killed herself in despair and that Rudolf had committed suicide when he found her body, others telling of an alleged suicide pact between the lovers and still others hinting at complicity on the part of certain court officials who had been instructed to put a stop to the intimacy between the baroness and the crown prince "at any cost."

A fourth story, which gained considerable credence on the continent, was connected with a former fiance of the baroness, whom she had discarded in favor of Prince Rudolf. This personage, whose name was freely mentioned, was known to have been in the vicinity of Meyerling castle on the night of the tragedy, and the report was that he had secured admittance to the apartments of the prince by bribing several of the servants, and had shot both Rudolf and the baroness, making his escape before the double murder was discovered.

Still another angle to the whole affair appeared several years later when the former crown prince and the baroness were reported to have been seen in the United States, and it was freely hinted that news of their deaths had been given to the world in order to cover a scandal which would have shaken the throne of Austria and imperiled the friendship then existing between that country and Belgium. That this version of the tragedy is not as wild as it appears is evident from the fact that one of the foremost encyclopedias states that the crown prince "is believed to have died, probably by his own hand, at the Castle Meyerling."

But the entire affair—whether double murder, a suicide pact or an attempt to cover a scandal—is only one of the many tragedies which made their appearance during the reign of Franz-Joseph, tragedies which included his unhappy marriage with the Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria; the execution of his brother, the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico; the mysterious disappearance of the Grand Duke Johann Salvator; the murder of the Empress Elizabeth at Geneva and the assassination of the heir to the throne, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his morganatic wife, the final tragedy which led to the greatest of all—the World war and the subsequent partition of the kingdom.

BROOKHART IS ASSAILED AS IMITATING LENINE

Lenroot Says Iowa Senator's Farm Credit Plans Mean "Special Privilege."

Washington D. C., Feb. 2—Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, was accused in the senate yesterday by Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, of advocating farm credits and other legislation similar to the soviet policies of Lenine and Trotzky.

Attacking the plan of Senator Brookhart for co-operative banks with farmer management, Senator Lenroot said in a recent New York speech on the Lenroot-Anderson farm credit bill that the aims and purposes of Senator Brookhart "are the same as those of Lenine and Trotzky in soviet Russia."

"I challenge the senator to point the distinction in his program," said Senator Lenroot.

"In a recent New York speech," he added, Senator Brookhart had advocated a plan for prohibition of interstate commerce except under federal charter and under the Roachdale co-operative system. No one could engage in commerce under that plan, Senator Lenroot said, unless they belonged to a producers' or consumers' association.

"Why, Lenine himself," continued the Wisconsin senator, "wouldn't think of advocating such a proposition."

Senator Lenroot also suggested that Senator Brookhart had been advocating 'special privilege' for farmers and sought to create political issues.

"Congress cannot pass legislation affecting a special class," said the Wisconsin senator.

"And what class would be prevented from joining the association under the Roachdale system?" asked Senator Brookhart.

"I want to assure the senator from Iowa," said Senator Lenroot, "that some senators who are not members of the farm bloc are yet friends of the farmers and are endeavoring by constructive legislation to help him, but yet do not find it necessary to be constantly parading, on the stump and here in the senate, their friendship for the farmer."

Senator Brookhart, replying, took exception to Mr. Lenroot's assertion that the constitution prohibited legislation such as that advocated in the New York speech.

"That class in which liberty lives," said Mr. Lenroot, with slow emphasis, "that class of American citizen who holds forever to his personal rights, and would refuse flatly to join your co-operative association. I hope there is not another member on this floor or on the floor of the other house who holds the views the senator from Iowa says he holds."

Mr. Brookhart rejoined that the need of an "elementary" school in the senate, such as he proposed yesterday, was becoming more and more apparent.

"I was told when I came to Washington," the Iowa senator continued, "that I would face the conspiracy of such charges. It appeared today in the United States senate. But I do not care. It was such charges that enabled me to carry all but five counties in my state, and the senator from Wisconsin will find—when he returns home, that the people of Wisconsin now know what a co-operative association really is."

Declaring he was prepared to fight daily to bring back the republican party to its original tenets, Mr. Brookhart said this had been accomplished in the last election in Iowa and Wisconsin.

"The senator has said with truth," he added, "that the people of Wisconsin have much to answer for, and among these things is the junior senator of the state."

Mr. Brookhart's statement that the Lenroot measure would have the effect of preventing the laborer and farmer from pooling his savings to form a reserve fund was wholly contradicted by the author of the measure, who read a clause in support of his contention that to the contrary such operations were specifically authorized.

"The senator from Iowa is so careless of his facts that I don't care to answer him further," Mr. Learoot declared finally, ending the argument.

SHAWL OF TRAGEDY

This "moonbeam shawl," once owned by an Egyptian captive princess and now possessed by Miss Ruthelma Stevens of San Francisco, Cal., is made of sterling silver links which were welded into the linen mesh more than 150 years ago. The little captive princess for whom it was made tried to escape and meet her lover one night, but was run down by guards and killed. The lover treasured the shawl, but one day bandits took it from him and left him dead on the desert. They sold the shawl in a bazaar at Port Said and last summer while Miss Stevens' mother was traveling in Egypt she bought the shawl and brought it home as a gift to her daughter, Ruthelma. The shawl now adorns one of our own princesses while doing her oriental dances.

April 1 This Year Marks Both Easter and Jewish Passover

Easter Day this year falls on April 1, and for the first time in twenty years it falls on the same day as the Jewish Passover. It will again fall on the same day at the Jewish Passover in 1927 when Easter Day will be April 17. One object in selecting the present method of determining Easter Day by the calendar moon was that it might not fall on the Jewish Passover. It did occur on the same day, however, in 1805, 1825, and 1903.

It is not the actual moon in the heavens, nor even the mean moon of astronomers, that regulates the time of Easter, but an altogether imaginary moon, whose periods are so contrived that the new (calendar) moon always follows the real moon. The effect of this is that the fourteenth of the Gregorian calendar moon falls generally on the fifteenth or sixteenth of real moon, and thus after the real full moon. So, the rule is that Easter Day is always the first Sunday after the paschal full moon; that is, the full moon which happens upon or after March 21. If the full moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday after.

The use of eggs on Easter Day is an old custom, the egg having been considered in pre-Christian mythology as a symbol of resurrection.
